- A place to share my background, interests, and digital work.
- A little about me
    - Hi! My name is Andreina Ortiz, and I'm a senior at Rutgers University–New Brunswick, majoring in Human Resource Management with a minor in Digital Communication, Information, and Media (DCIM). As a Dominican student, I've always valued creativity, culture, and connecting with people. Throughout college, I've developed an interest in marketing, graphic design, social media, and human resources. I enjoy finding creative ways to communicate ideas, whether that's through designing promotional materials, planning events, or creating digital content.
    - As I prepare to graduate, I'm excited to explore career opportunities that allow me to combine my creativity, communication skills, and experience working with people.
- About this website
    - I created this website using HTML as a way to showcase my academic journey, professional experience, personal interests, and creative projects. I wanted to create something that reflected my personality while also highlighting the different skills I've developed throughout college. I worked on organizing the website's structure, writing the content, and customizing the layout and visual elements to make everything feel more personal.
    - Building this website also gave me the opportunity to practice my web development skills and better understand how websites are created and designed. I used available resources and guidance throughout the process to help with coding, troubleshooting, and improving the overall design.

- Professional development and goals
    - Throughout my time at Rutgers, I've gained experience in leadership, marketing, event planning, and digital content creation. I've worked with programs such as Canva, Adobe Photoshop, Adobe InDesign, Microsoft

Office, and WordPress to develop creative projects and promotional materials.
    - Although my major is in Human Resource Management, my college experiences have also helped me discover how much I enjoy the creative side of business. I'm particularly interested in digital marketing, branding, graphic design, and creative strategy. One of my long-term goals is to work in the beauty, skincare, or lifestyle industry, where I can combine my interest in branding and visual storytelling with my communication and business background.
- Outside the Classroom
    - Outside of school and work, I enjoy dancing, creating digital designs, exploring beauty and fashion trends, and spending time with friends and family. Dancing has been a big part of my college experience, especially through my involvement with the Rutgers University Bachata Team. It's given me the opportunity to stay connected to my culture, meet new people, and be part of a community that shares my love for Latin music and dance.
    - I also enjoy experimenting with graphic design and creating content that reflects my personal style. Whether I'm working on a flyer, putting together an outfit, or finding inspiration for a new project, I love being able to express myself creatively.
- Organizations and community
    - Sigma Lambda Gamma National Sorority, Inc. | Psi Alpha Chapter 2024–2026 Throughout my involvement in Sigma Lambda Gamma, I've had the opportunity to hold several leadership positions, including:
        - Chapter President (2024–2025)
        - Marketing Director (2024–2025)
        - Sisterhood Relations Chair (2024–2025)
        - Academic Chair (2026)
    - These positions have allowed me to develop my leadership, communication, organization, and teamwork skills. From coordinating chapter initiatives to supporting academic success and creating promotional content, I've learned how to balance different responsibilities while working toward shared goals.
    - Rutgers University Bachata Club 2023–2026
        - Marketing Chair (2023–2025)
        - Treasurer (2025–2026)
    - As Marketing Chair, I created promotional materials and helped develop marketing strategies to increase student engagement and event attendance. I enjoyed finding ways to make our events stand out and creating designs that reflected the club's energy and culture.

    - As Treasurer, I helped manage the club's finances, organize budgets, and support event planning.
    - Rutgers University Latino Student Council Treasurer (2023–2024)
        - As Treasurer, I helped manage financial responsibilities and supported initiatives that brought together different Latino student organizations on campus. Being involved in these organizations has been one of the most meaningful parts of my college experience because they've allowed me to grow as a leader while staying connected to my community.
- What inspires my work
    - A lot of my inspiration comes from my culture, the people around me, and the things I enjoy in my everyday life. I've always loved being creative, whether it's through fashion, beauty, music, or designing something from scratch. I enjoy being able to take an idea in my head and turn it into something that other people can see and connect with.
    - One thing I've learned about myself throughout college is that I genuinely enjoy the creative process. During my time as Marketing Chair for the Rutgers University Bachata Club, I loved coming up with different themes, experimenting with colors and designs, and finding ways to make our events stand out. It was always exciting to see people interact with something I created, especially when it helped bring more students together. I think what inspires me the most is being able to express my personality through my work while also creating something meaningful for others. I don't want to create things just because they look nice. I want them to tell a story, make people feel something, or leave a lasting impression.
- Digital Capstone Project
    - Trial by TikTok: How Social Media Influences True Crime Cases
        - For my DCIM Capstone project at Rutgers University, I created Trial by TikTok, a research project exploring how social media influences public opinion surrounding criminal investigations and high-profile trials. The purpose of my project is to examine how platforms like TikTok, Instagram, and YouTube have changed the way people follow true crime cases. While social media can help spread awareness, share important information, and bring attention to victims, it can also lead to misinformation, false accusations, and people forming opinions before all the facts are available.
        - My project is intended for social media users, true crime followers, and anyone interested in understanding how digital media can influence our perceptions of guilt, innocence, and justice. I independently researched and analyzed several high-profile cases, including the Gabby Petito investigation, the Idaho student murders, and the Johnny Depp v. Amber Heard trial. I organized my research into different themes to explore how online communities investigate crimes, how people are judged in the court of public opinion, and how sympathy and bias influence the way stories are told.

- Throughout the process, I examined news coverage, documentaries, social media discussions, and legal documents to compare how information was presented across different platforms. One of the biggest things I've learned is how easily a short video, viral theory, or misleading headline can shape someone's opinion, even when important context is missing.
- Through this project, I hope to encourage people to think more critically about the true crime content they consume and recognize the impact that online speculation can have on real people.
